Materials

- Lesson Plan 6
- Handout 1: History of Monument at the University of Mississippi (secondary source)
- Handout 2: excerpts from the Oxford Eagle (primary source)
- Handout 3: excerpts and annotations from Scott speech (primary source)
- Discussion Questions and Writing Prompt
- Key Terms List
- Unit Graphic Organizer

Probing for Prior Knowledge
(5-10 minutes)

Activate Prior Knowledge (5 minutes): Have students use their graphic organizer to independently complete the pre-reading activity. Students can compare with their peers and then share out with the class.

Mississippi and the Lost Cause
Historical Background
(10 min)

Explain that the class will be reading specifically about the history of Confederate monuments and symbols in the state of Mississippi. They will be examining the history and debate around the confederate monument at the University of Mississippi. Students should utilize what they have learned in the previous lesson about the Lost Cause myth and apply it to this case study.

Key Terms
(10-15minutes)

Review terms and definitions as a class. Clarify any terms students may have had difficulty with. Make sure to reinforce the vocabulary as students read the material.

Reading Materials
(20-30 min)

Break students into groups of 4-5. Students can read individually or together in groups/pairs. Students can use the graphic organizer provided while reading to help track their comprehension.

Be sure to explain the difference between primary and secondary sources with students:

Sample Language:

- Primary sources are firsthand accounts of what happened during a particular historical time period. They can be letters, diary entries, speeches, newspapers (from that time period), photographs, etc.
- Secondary sources are not complete firsthand accounts, although they can contain primary source information such as quotes from people who lived during that time in history. Secondary sources are accounts recorded outside of (that is, after) the particular historical time period they discuss.

They can be published research articles, books, and other forms of media on a particular historical topic.¹

Groups should be heterogeneous based on reading levels so that students can collaborate effectively with less assistance from the teacher. Circulate and offer help if needed.

Discussion (30 minutes)
After reading and reviewing documents, instruct students to begin answering discussion questions. Explain to students that they will be working together to determine the best argument/position for each question. To do this, they will engage in three rounds of dialogue (time permitting) with each question. <ul style="list-style-type: none">• In the first round, students will consider one position and come up with reasons or evidence to support it.• In the second round, students will consider the opposing position, identifying reasons or evidence to refute the first position.• In the third round, students will work together to come up with the best answer to the question. Remind students that they are working together to come up with the most convincing argument. You can also assign roles within groups, such as question reader, note taker, reporter. Students will share responses with the whole class after the group discussion. Circulate while students discuss; do not necessarily provide answers but ask probing questions to proposed simple solutions.

Writing Prompt
Have students independently answer the writing prompt after whole class discussion <ul style="list-style-type: none">• The writing prompt can be assigned as homework if time does not permit completion.
